TWENTY YEARS AGO

Physicians sent their throat and lung patients toward the tropics. Now they send them northward—to the mountains—up among the pines. Sufferers from throat and lung troubles experience a wonderful sense of relief in the fragrant atmosphere of a pine country.

Santa Abie

is prepared from Abietine Balsam, obtained from a few species of pine found only in California and Norway, and from Yerba Santa, better known as Mountain Balm. Soothing, healing and restorative, Santa Abie is a most useful remedy for coughs, colds, grippe, asthma, bronchitis and all other diseases of like character. Easy to take, quick in its effects. Every bottle guaranteed.

DUAL PERSONALITY.

RESIDUAL PHENOMENA OF THE MIND IN SANE PEOPLE.

This Feature of Complex Personality is Best Seen in the Case of a So-Called Absent-minded Business Man—Experiences of the Sleeping Mind.

Evidence is not wanting to show that what we call personality is an extremely complex thing, the sum of subsidiary personalities which now shift and change like the figures in a kaleidoscope, and again becoming sharply defined under some abnormal condition crystallize into two or more distinct groups of elements which alternately sleep and wake or even coexist. These complex elements may be so unstable, the groups comprising them constantly breaking up and forming new combinations, that the idea of multiple personality does not naturally attach itself to them; it is only when they become stable, and especially when each exhibits a well defined consciousness that we begin to think of such a thing. But besides the abnormal and diseased conditions which cause such a separation or crystallization there are other conditions in which it appears somewhat less distinctly. To one class of these I desire to call attention very briefly—to that embracing what may be called cases of residual personality.

Residual phenomena of all kinds are particularly interesting and instructive, especially those where the few things remaining in a group after many have been removed differ widely in their collective properties from those that have been taken away, while these latter are not in any way distinguishable from those of the sum of both before the division. This is the case often with residual personality. Nothing is more common than for a group of elements in what we call a person to be differentiated in one of various ways, leaving behind a residual group differing altogether in its characteristics, though the differentiated group represents to us and is considered to be identical with the original person.

The commonest method of such differentiation is sleep. The elements of sleep are, as it were, subtracted from the normal personality, but there is usually left behind a very curious something—illogical, credulous, fantastic—which mighty珍惜 the whole reunited person recollects in the morning as dreams. The next commonest case is that of the absent-minded person. The major part of the person being absorbed in mental processes of some sort, the residual person lives its own separate mental life, thinks, feels and wills by itself, and perhaps carries on a train of processes which is continuous with a preceding train carried on under similar circumstances the day before.

This residual person may act very mechanically. The united person may fail to remember who he was or thoughts dear and dearest to him, but what he vainly regards as the unalterable ego—has been absorbed in thought. But, on the other hand, it may be perfectly conscious and may carry on an entirely different train of thought of its own. Almost always, however, it is eccentric and betrays a weakness at one point or another.

For instance, a suburban resident, whom we will call A, is accustomed on landing at the New York side of the ferry to abandon the mechanical task of walking to his office entirely to his residual personality and to give up the major part of himself to thought. The two personalities act often with perfect—always with practical—separateness, the residual person being quite equal to the low task of evading vehicles, steering clear of passersby and turning the proper corners. When the office is reached and the two persons again become one, it is often a difficult task to remember any circumstances of the walk.

On one occasion, however, A left the Astor library on Lafayette place, as he supposed, intending to walk down Clinton place. To do this he must turn first to the left, then to the right and then again to the left. He turned once to the left, and after some time became dimly conscious that he had walked for a long time, and that the place for the second turn had not been reached.

Coming to himself, he found himself far down Broadway. Tracing back his course mentally, he discovered that he had been in the Mercantile library instead of the Astor. His first turn therefore had taken him down Broadway, and he of course did not reach the place for the second. Mark now the peculiarities of his residual person. It knew just where it was to turn and in what direction, and had sense enough to be uneasy when it did not come to the proper place to turn, but it had not intelligence enough to know that it was on the wrong street. Its mind was too weak to be trusted further than it was accustomed to go. This residual person, in short, was about on a par with a harmless idiot.

Again, B, a New Yorker, is walking along absorbed in a process of thought, when his residual personality sees his friend C approaching. It is not astonished, for he is near C's lodgings, but as the person supposed to be C comes nearer, it sees that he only slightly resembles C. He has on shabby clothes, and his face is entirely different. The natural conclusion would be that the person approaching was not C. The residual person, however, does not argue thus. It concludes that C has greatly changed, that he has become poor and that his appearance has altered for the worse.

Pity and surprise are plainly felt by the residual person. During these mental processes, so similar to those of a dream residual, the major person has kept on with his own train of thought. Finally, however, on the close approach of the supposed C, they unite in a flash into the normal person, the two separate constituents becoming one, and the truth is recognized at once. No doubt these cases can be paralleled by thousands of others. It seems to me that they are as true instances of double personality as any exhibited by epileptic or hysterical persons.—A. E. Boswick in Science.

CONTROLLING RAILROADS.

It has been alleged, and there is much cause to believe the allegation is well founded, that the railroads have been running not only the governments of the several States but the national government also. The legislature of Nebraska proposes to change this order of business by enacting laws to control the railroads. What is known as the Newberry Maximum Freight bill has passed both houses and will doubtless be signed by the governor. The bill contains 220 pages of tabulated figures and covers everything conceivable that is transported by rail. It classifies all articles and aims to regulate the entire shipments of freights in the State, whether in pound or carload lots, and whether the distance be one mile or 200 miles.

It is not yet known what effect the bill will have, as it increases transportation rates on a few articles and lowers them on many others. It is to take effect next August and it is very likely its validity will be tested in the courts before the railroads will comply with its provisions. It is conceded to be a move in the right direction as it brings the railroads wholly under the control of the State.

As it may be of interest to know the political complexion of the law-making body that has taken this new departure the JOURNAL will state that there are fourteen Populists, fifteen Republicans and five Democrats in the senate, and forty Populists, forty-seven Republicans and twelve Democrats in the house. None of the parties has a majority in either house, but the independent members of the old parties vote with the Populists; hence the passage of the bill to regulate freight rates in the State.

There is no disposition anywhere among the people to cripple railroads, as they are recognized as a public necessity, but there is a general disposition to have the State and general governments control them, and there is no known way to do that except by legislation. If the Nebraska bill is unfair and does not allow railroads a fair margin for profit it will doubtless be amended, as its object is to prevent discrimination against persons and places by establishing rates that will be just to corporations and to the people.

OPPOSED TO RECIPROCITY.

It is announced that President Cleveland has virtually decided against reciprocity and will revoke the order made by President Harrison discriminating against imports from Venezuela and Columbia in South America, that business is injured by reason of the discrimination.

It has been contended that reciprocity is but another name for free trade, and that to be consistent should be extended to England and France, which purchase the bulk of the farm products exported, instead of being limited to a few small States whose trade with the United States is insignificant compared with the European trade. Reciprocity was a conception of Mr. Blaine, through whose influence it was appended to the McKinley bill, which he said did not make a market for one more bushel of wheat or barrel of pork. It authorized the president to virtually establish free trade with certain countries or impose a duty on imports from those countries by simply issuing a proclamation. It did not, as was anticipated, result in materially increasing our trade with Spanish-American countries, and it looked unreasonable, to say the least, for the United States to admit articles free of duty from countries which purchased small quantities of our pork and flour, while placing a high tariff on articles from nations which purchased large quantities of those products.

If the president rescinds the proclamation of President Harrison discriminating against the countries named it will indicate that he is not so much in favor of free trade as the Republican papers represented him to be.

GRAND CHIEF ARTHUR of the brotherhood of locomotive engineers is receiving a great deal of attention from the United States courts in Ohio and Michigan at the present time. A few days ago Judge Kicks issued an order forbidding him during certain things with the Lake shore road, and now Judge Taft has issued a decree prohibiting him from issuing any boycott order against the Ann Arbor road. If the courts do not persist in giving Chief Arthur so much notoriety he may yet be a candidate for President.

SENATOR STEWART has announced his intention to attend the trans-Mississippi congress at Ogden. The Salt Lake Herald hails the announcement as welcome news to the advocates of free coinage, says his stand prominent among the foremost champions of the silver cause. He has always been consistent in that, and whatever his former associates in the Republican party may think of his connection with the Populists, they cannot question his faithfulness to the silver interest.

The Denver News notes that the Idaho papers, regardless of politics are scoring Senator Dubois for opposing the appointment of Senator Stewart on the senate appropriation committee, on which he had held for years. Dubois voted with the goldbugs and against the silver senators in making committee assignments and the people of Idaho are naturally indignant at his recreancy.

POLITICAL FACTIONS FIGHT.

Railway Extension—Trans-Mississippi Congress.

Republicans and Prohibitionists Fight.

Special to the JOURNAL.

LONDON, April 8.—An attempt this morning on the part of the Republicans to make a public demonstration against the proposed law establishing local option resulted in a scene of riot and disorder. The riot was the result of plans deliberately prepared by temperance supporters of the bill. The temperance party, to the number of thousands, occupied Trafalgar Square before the arrival of the whisky party with the object of frustrating the demonstration. As the great procession of liquor men appeared the temperance people pounced upon them and their banners were quickly reduced to shreds. Free fights were frequent. The temperance party next proceeded to hold forth. The liquor party, enraged by previous attacks, became aggressive and the first temperance speaker was knocked down and bruised. The temperance people rallied and renewed the attack, carrying all before them and obtaining full control.

Senate Confirmations.

Special to the JOURNAL.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The senate confirmed the following nominations: Jas. B. Eustis of Louisiana, ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to France; Bartlett Tripp of South Dakota, minister to Austria-Hungary; Thos. Brittenden of Missouri, consul-general at the city of Mexico; Asa A. Dickinson of New York, consul at Nottingham; Chas. S. Hamlin of Massachusetts, assistant secretary of the treasury; John B. Brawley, auditor of the treasury for the postoffice department; John M. Reynolds of Bedford, Pa., assistant secretary of the interior; Lawrence Maxwell, Jr., of Ohio, solicitor-general; John K. I. Hall of Georgia, assistant attorney-general.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Hawaiian minister to Washington said to-day that he should remain here some time as there was nothing for him to do in Washington until Commissioner Blount makes a report.

"He thinks he can do it in three months," said Smith, "but it is my candid opinion he will remain six months at least. President Cleveland, I believe has drawn up a treaty with the islands, but just what it is no one appears to know but himself. For that matter no one knows what he proposes to do with it."

Distribution of Seeds.

Special to the JOURNAL.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Secretary Morton has already begun to realize that some vexations are attending the seed distribution assigned by law to the department of agriculture. The seedsmen are anxious to know what will be the policy of the department in regard to the purchase of seeds for distribution, and in reply to inquiries addressed to him on the subject Secretary Morton said his policy would be to purchase seeds grown in the United States in open market. The quality and price being the only questions he would consider.

Washington Notes.

Special to the JOURNAL.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—By direction of Secretary Carlisle the regulations of the treasury department in relation to the registration of Chinese laborers, was to-day modified, dispensing with the attaching of photos and requiring affidavit only.

The total number of fourth class postmasters appointed to-day was 120. The usual proclamation prohibiting the taking of seals or other for bearing animals in Alaska or in the Behring sea in the season of 1893 was promulgated by President Cleveland to-day.

Railway Extension.

Special to the JOURNAL.

OGDEN, Utah, April 8.—The rumor that the Northwestern railway will extend its line from the present terminus at Casper, Wyo., through to Ogden, Utah, and secure an outlet to the Pacific coast, received some verification yesterday when five cars of railroad and grading outfit passed through here for Casper. No definite knowledge of the company's intention can yet be secured.

Protecting Them.

Special to the JOURNAL.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Secretary Hovey Smith, acting under the authority of the treaty of 1865, which provides that the United States shall protect the Choctaws and Chickasaws from domestic strife, requested the secretary of war to at once send a detachment of troops to the scene of the threatened trouble and maintain peace and protect life and property.

Dissatisfied With Maxwell's Policy.

Special to the JOURNAL.

NEW YORK, April 8.—From Boston comes a dispatch to the evening Post stating that William Lloyd Garrison and other leading Independents there are thoroughly disgusted with Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General Maxwell's rapid removal of Republican postmasters and there is earnest talk of public protest soon unless the policy of the administration is changed.

Trans-Mississippi Congress.

Special to the JOURNAL.

OGDEN, Utah, April 8.—Unusual interest is being taken in the coming session of the Trans-Mississippi congress to meet here on the 24th inst. Two special trains will come with delegates from different points in Colorado. Hon. Thos. L. Fitch has been invited to address the congress on any subject he may select of western importance.

Two Hundredth Anniversary.

Special to the JOURNAL.

NEW YORK, April 8.—The two hundredth anniversary of the introduction of the printing press in the colony and city of New York was celebrated with appropriate exercises at the building of the New York Cotton Exchange this afternoon.

Engagement Announced.

Special to the JOURNAL.

NEW YORK, April 8.—Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Marian Phelps, the only daughter of William Walter Phelps, ex-minister to Germany, to Dr. Franz Vonkenhoven, under State Secretary of Germany.

Weather Forecast.

Special to the JOURNAL.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 8.—The forecast for Nevada is fair weather and slight changes in temperature.

The New York Tribune says that a letter was received at the Topeka post-office addressed to George W. Eight-quarte, Esq., and was duly delivered to the proper party, George W. Peck.

Notice of Removal.

Special to the JOURNAL.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The trip of Mr. V. J. B. C. to the West Coast, and the act of the schoolgirls in the schools of schoolgirls in the West Coast, a dozen schools, 12 to 16 years old, clad in their school uniforms, the prettiest ones in Steve's, was prima facie evidence, but the vice-president-elect had given to the train of the train to a test election. While they waited the girls intended Mrs. Stevens and the rest of the party and were very happy when the train began to move. The party were assured the train was only moving to switch and would be run back.

But the invader was all straight ahead and to the great glee of the sound of schoolgirls and the surprise of the Stevens the train got up speed and went flying away. When it was concluded that the train intended to make its next stop at the station, the signal was given to the children were set down and started on their pilgrimage back to school about the most elated band in the state.—Chicago Herald.

A Frivolous People.
"I maintain," said a shrewd observer recently, "that the American people are becoming frivolous."

When he was asked what evidence he could bring to prove his assertion true, he replied:

"I want no better evidence than their indifference to serious public affairs. Our political system has developed certain defects, but no effort is made to get rid of them. The people of some of our largest states submit to 'boss rule' which they could crush forever by giving attention to caucus and the polls for three consecutive years."

"See, too, how a system of frequent and prolonged holidays has developed. We work fewer days and fewer hours in the day than our fathers or even our older brothers did. Every one seems to be forever looking forward to vacation like a schoolboy."

"And what do they read? What do you read? When you open your paper in the morning, to what do you turn first? To the proceedings of congress, or the great happenings at home or abroad? I know not. You look at the score of the baseball games, or the discoveries of reporters relative to the latest sensational murder, or at some other personal stuff about people of whom you never heard before, and who are dragged before the public by circumstances in which the public ought not to have the smallest interest."

This is a harsh judgment, but it cannot be denied that there is enough truth in it to cause us to pause and remember with the poet that "life is real, life is earnest!"—Youth's Companion.

Stealing the Declaration of Independence.

When James Monroe was president and John Quincy Adams secretary of state, an ingenious English engraver obtained permission of the two dignitaries mentioned to take the Declaration of Independence and engrave it in facsimile on copper. He carried the precious document to the printing office of one Peter Force. When everything was in readiness, he placed it upon the imposing stone and laid a sheet of india paper of the same size upon it. This india paper was next moistened with water in which gum arabic had been dissolved. A heavy proof roller with a weight hanging from each end was then rolled several times over the historic document. When the india paper was removed from the face of the instrument, it took with it at least one-half of the ink used in writing and signing the document.

The document is less than a century and a quarter old, and with proper care should be almost as legible as it was on the 5th day of July, 1776. As it is, only 11 signatures out of the 53 can be read without a glass, and some of them have disappeared beyond recall, all on account of the thieving trick of a government which, when they found that they could not keep the colonies dependent, stole the very ink from the documents which declared our independence.—St. Louis Republic.

The wife of Robert Louis Stevenson.

Mrs. Robert Louis Stevenson is a portly, gray-haired woman, who was a grandmother—and looked it—when she married this second husband, Herzon Lloyd, who collaborated with Stevenson in the ghastly tales, "The Wrong Box" and "The Wrecker," was a middle-aged man before he began to write. Her only other child is the wife of Joseph Strong, the artist, and herself a painter in a small way. Stevenson has been accused of thrusting his sisters, his cousins and his aunts into fiction. Certainly, although Fanny Stevenson has produced some creditable work as Mrs. Osborne, she had no reputation for brilliancy in a very clever San Francisco set. There she was introduced solely in the capacity of chamberlain, to sit, smiling, in her black silk gown, while her gay little daughter sang French songs or chatted with the bright Bohemian club men.—New York Times

How Tennyson Decided a Matter.

Here is Tennyson's own account to Mr. James Knowles, editor of The Nineteenth Century, of how he was offered and accepted the laureateship: "The night before I was asked to take the laureateship, which was offered to me through Prince Albert's liking for my 'Memorian,' I dreamed he came to me and kissed me on the cheek. I said in my dream, 'Very kind, but very German.' In the morning the letter about the laureateship was brought to me and upon my bed. I thought about it through the day, but could not make up my mind whether to take it or refuse it, and at last I wrote two letters, one accepting and one declining, and threw them on the table and settled to decide which I would send after my dinner and bottle of port."

The Letter "R" In Conversation.

The letter "r" has met with almost as many vicissitudes of late as the unfortunate British "h," and the "v" unlike the "h" is not exempt from danger in America. To be sure, the most elegantly soft spoken American does not pronounce "modern" as if it were written "modn," a common pronunciation among the upper classes of Great Britain, but the "v" suffers a somewhat similar elision in many words throughout this latitude, and even the superphoners "v" often heard in the New England pronunciation of "law" is met with in and about New York. Curiously enough most persons who are guilty of this blunder seem incapable of distinguishing between the correct and the incorrect pronunciation in the month of a third per-

Congressional Misters.

It would be interesting to calculate and valuable to find out just how much of the people's time and money are wasted in "misters." The representative seems to have a deep rooted objection to being called plain Smith or Brown or Robinson and insists that he be called "mister" even if, as is frequently the case, he does not know why the roll is called. About two hours a day through a long session amounts to considerable wear and tear of the treasury as well as of the clerk's lung tissue.—Washington Post.
